How Do You Make Poker Hands in Texas Hold'em?

Everyone receives two hole cards that they can combine with five community cards. These cards can be used by everyone to make a five-card poker hand.

The community cards are dealt in three stages:

- The flop (three cards)
- The turn (one card)
- The river (one card)

Let's say you're dealt A♦ K♦ and stay in the hand until the flop. The first three community cards are J♦ 6♦ 7♠. At this point, you've got enough cards to make a five-card poker hand.

However, as you can see from our hands ranking chart, you only have a "high card." You stick around to see the turn. The 2♦ lands on the turn.

Now, you can combine your hole cards (A♦ K♦) with J♦ 6♦ 7♠ 2♦. Using our poker hands chart, you can see that five suited cards make a flush.

Basic Poker Strategy: Odds and Outs

Knowing the rank of poker hands is important, but it's not enough to make you a winning player. That's why I like to consider the odds of each hand when I'm making decisions.

For example, we know from our poker hands cheat sheet that hitting a royal flush on the flop is incredibly unlikely (it happens 0.005% of the time). In contrast, you'll make a pair approximately 1/3 of the time (29%) in Hold'em.

That's useful information because it tells us two things:

1. Opponents don't flop good poker hands very often.
2. We won't flop the best hands in poker very often.

Based on these assumptions, we should be more willing to continue in a hand if we have a strong draw. Why? Because we don't have anything and, most likely, neither do our opponents.

Moreover, if an opponent does have a hand, it's less likely to be among the best poker hands. Therefore, if we hit our draw or apply enough pressure on later streets to make weak hands fold, we could win the pot.

Importance of Hand Rankings in Poker Strategy

We've already teased out some basic poker theory from our hand rankings chart. Let's build on this by putting together a strategy for playing Texas Hold'em poker hands:

could be described as a good starting hand.

Weak Starting Hands in Poker

A weak starting hand contains two cards that are unconnected in terms of numerical value and suits. The weakest starting hand in poker is 7-2 offsuit, e.g. 7♥ 2♠.

These two cards are as unconnected as they could possibly be. Because of this, it's hard to make winning poker hands with 7-2 offsuit. The Best Starting Hands in Texas Hold'em.

Here are the best starting hands in poker broken down into categories:

- Pocket Pairs: A-A, K-K, Q-Q, J-J, T-T.
- Ace-High Hands: A-K (suited and unsuited), A-Q (suited and unsuited), A-J (suited and unsuited), A-T (suited and unsuited).
- King-High Hands: K-Q (suited and unsuited), K-J (suited and unsuited).
- Suited Connectors: Q-J, J-T, T-9, 8-9, 7-6.
- Connectors: Q-J, J-T, T-9.

All of the above are good poker hands, but that doesn't mean you should play them blindly. Context matters. For example, suited connectors are great if you're in a late position and there are multiple people in hand because the pot odds are in your favor.

However, if you're first to act on an aggressive table, suited connectors are a fold. Therefore, you should assess the game's dynamics and use our poker hands cheat sheet to decide if your cards are good enough to play.

Step 2. Know Your Odds: The Rule of 4 & 2

The art of making winning poker hands is knowing how likely they are to hit on the flop, turn, and river. I've already given you the odds of making poker hands on the flop in Hold'em, so let's talk about the turn and river.

The easiest way to calculate your chances of making ranked hands in poker is the Rule of 4 & 2.

Here's an example of the Rule of 4 & 2 in action:

- Your hole cards = A♦ K♦
- Flop: J♦ 6♦ 7♠
- Your outs (cards that can make a flush) = 9 diamonds
- Your odds of hitting a flush on the turn or river =  $9 \times 4 = 36\%$
- Your odds of hitting a flush on the river =  $9 \times 2 = 18\%$

These quick calculations can tell you whether it's worth continuing in a hand based on the amount of money in the pot and what you might theoretically win. A high percentage chance + a big potential payoff can be reasons to continue.

Step 3. Use the Poker Hands Ranking Chart

For example, two players can have a flush in Texas Hold'em, so a winner has to be determined using the highest card.

Here are two hands of equal rank. See if you can pick the winning player:

- Player 1 Hand: 5♦ 6♦
- Player 2 Hand: A♦ 2♦
- Board: 3♦ J♦ T♦ 8♠ A♣

Winner = Player 2 is the winner because their highest card is an ace.

That means they have an ace-high flush, which is better than Player 1's six-high flush.

This method for dealing with tie-breakers is known as a kicker card. If two hands have the same rank at a showdown, a player's highest card (the kicker) is used to determine a winner.

Advanced Poker Tips and Tricks

The art of hand reading is based on three main variables:

- Your cards
- The community cards
- Your opponent's actions and tendencies

Let's say you're holding K♣ Q♣, and the board is J♣ T♣ 5♦ 2♣. You know your opponent is loose and aggressive, which means they play a wide range of poker hands.

Your opponent makes a big bet on the turn. Using the three variables above, we could make a case for calling or raising. Firstly, your cards give you straight, flush, and straight flush draws.

Secondly, we know this opponent plays a lot of hands, which means they're likely to be bluffing or have a weak hand. Raising in this spot would force them to fold bluffs and a lot of weak hands.

Alternatively, if you call, you could make a lot of good poker hands on the river and potentially win a showdown.
